Widow, Member Of Ochs Family Of U.S. Publishers, Dies At 97

Mrs. Milton Barlow Ochs, widow of the former vice president of The Chattanooga Times Printing Company, died in her suite at the Patten Hotel. She was 97 years old. Mrs. Ochs, the former Miss Fanny VanDyke, was married to Col. Milton B. Ochs on April 26, 1893, says the New York Times. At the time, Colonel Ochs was managing editor of The Chattanooga Times.

Her husband, who died in 1955, was the brother of two other newspaper publishers, Adolph S. Ochs, of The New York Times, who died in 1935; and George W. Ochs, of The Philadelphia Public Ledger, who changed his surname in 1917 to Ochs Oakes. He died in 1931. She was the aunt of Arthur Hays Sulzberger, chairman of the board of The New York Times; and the great-aunt of Arthur Ochs Sulzberger, its president and publisher.

Mrs. Ochs, who was called Miss Fan by her friends, was active in

Israel Should Not Be An Issue In Jewish Life, Says Rabbi

A rabbi in Conservative Judaism deplored the tendency of American Jews to make Israel "an issue in Jewish life." Instead, Rabbi Phillip Sigal, leader of the Beth Abraham Synagogue, in Bridgeton, N.J., called for a greater emphasis, says the New York Times, on the "theology and practices of Judaism and its relationship to the fabric of American civilization."

Rabbi Sigal spoke at a meeting of the American Council for Judaism in New York. He is not a member of the Council, which is strongly opposed to the Zionist movement.

"For them," he added, "it denote's one's expression as a Jew through a variety of ways that are basically secular including music, drama, Hebrew or Yiddish literature, an interest in Israel, and promotion of the 'kahal,' or the medieval centralized community idea. For peoplehood proponents, religion is not an absolute necessity although many of them nat-

Treblinka Death Camp Trial, Second Biggest, Gave Four Life Sentences; Nine Others Lesser Terms

Sentences of life imprisonment were passed last month on four former S.S. men who were on the staff of the Treblinka extermination camp in Poland. The prosecution had asked for life sentences on seven of the ten men in the dock. The trial, which ended in Düsseldorf, West Germany, was the second biggest after the Auschwitz trial in Frankfurt, says the London Times. One of the accused, Otto Horn, aged 61, was acquitted.

Hubert Franz, aged 50, the deputy camp commandant, and the principal accused, was sentenced to life imprisonment for murder involving 139 persons, and for complicity in the murder of 300,000. He was accused of particularly sadistic maltreatment of the Jewish victims. The president of the court in his summing up, described him as the "terror of the camp".

On inspections on foot, bicycle, or horseback he beat up, struck dead, or shot inmates at random. At least 25 cases had been proved against him. He was also convicted of having smashed children's heads against the barrack walls or thrown them in the air.

His contention that he had tried to help the inmates was described by the president as groundless impudence. The truth was that he had used his power in the most shocking and unrestrained manner to make their short life a veritable hell. During the reading of his misdeeds Franz continually shook his head in denial and smiled wryly. The president of the court emphasized that the trial was not a war crimes trial or a political trial. The physical extermination of the Jews was unconnected with any military circumstance. It had been carried out during the war because the "smoke of the battlefields concealed to some extent the crimes".

Treblinka was one of the three extermination camps set up in Poland under the name "Operation Rheinhard" at the end of 1941. Over two years between 1,500,000 and 1,750,000 Jews were done to death in them.

The president said the number of victims in Treblinka was difficult to assess, but some yardstick was provided by the fact that at the time when it was in full activity between 5,000 and 6,000 persons were "handled" daily. The staff of the camp consisted of 25 to 30 Germans; 90 to 120 Ukrainian volunteers; and 400 to 1,000 so-called "working Jews", themselves slaughtered in turn.

The figure of 700,000 victims for Treblinka between the summer of 1942 and the autumn of the following year was based on the evidence of the few survivors and on the population of the Jewish ghettos for which Treblinka was specifically earmarked, says the London Times. Altogether 150 witnesses from Germany and abroad were called to give evidence in the trial.

All the accused except Franz had admitted their guilt in the exterminations, and expressed shame for their deeds. The prosecution has decided to appeal against the sentences passed on three of the accused — Otto Stadies, aged 67; Franz Suchomel, aged 57; and Gustav Münzberger, aged 61; for whom life terms were demanded. They were sent to prison for between six and 12 years.

The West German court found nine former members of Hitler's SS (Elite Guard) guilty last month of participation in the murder of 700,000 Jews in the Treblinka extermination camp in Poland, says the New York Times. The Düsseldorf court sentenced four of the former camp functionaries, including former SS men nicknamed: the Doll, Frankenstein; and the Angel of Death, by Treblinka inmates, to life imprisonment at hard labour.

Treblinka was one of three Nazi death camps functioning in Poland before Auschwitz was turned into a mass extermination plant late in 1943. The two other camps were Sobibor and Belzec.

An estimated total of three to four million people was murdered at Auschwitz. A court in Frankfurt found 17 former members of the Auschwitz SS staff guilty of participation in murder and torture. Most of the Treblinka victims were Jews from the ghettos of Warsaw and other Polish cities.

The key defendant of the 11-month Treblinka trial was Karl Hubert Franz, 51 years old, the former deputy commandant. Franz, called "The Doll" by inmates because he affected flashy uniforms and shiny boots, was one of the four to receive life imprisonment.

Throughout the trial Franz insisted that he was not "The Doll" of Treblinka. It was a case of mistaken identity, he contended. The real "Doll" was the camp commandant, Dr. Imried Ebal, who committed suicide in 1948, Franz insisted, says the New York Times. However, the court found him guilty of complicity in the murder of 300,000 Jews and of personally having murdered 139 more.

Witnesses at the trial testified that Franz would make regular "inspection" tours of Treblinka by foot, bicycle or horseback. He murdered prisoners by shooting them, hanging them, having them torn to pieces by his dog, or personally beating them to death.

Soviet Law Journal Rejects Book On Legal System By Harvard Professor

A Harvard University law professor has been accused in Moscow of having written a distorted interpretation of the Soviet legal system for anti-Communist motives. The Soviet Union's leading law journal, Soviet State And Law, charged Prof. Harold J. Berman with having written a misleading account of Soviet legal principles, reports the New York Times writer. Theodore Shabad, after he had been a "guest" of the Institute of State and Law of the Academy of Sciences.

In a review of Professor Berman's book, titled "Justice In The U.S.S.R.", published in New York in 1964, the journal accused the author of suggesting that the Soviet legal system was unstable and bordered on tyranny, that it lagged in sophistication behind the Western systems, and that its stress on education aspects gave Soviet law a "totalitarian and repressive character."

There was no indication in the review, signed by V. A. Tumanov, why the Russians had waited two years to publish an assessment of Professor Berman's book, which, as one of the most authoritative discussions of the Soviet legal system, has had a wide circulation abroad.

The review appeared a few months after the Harvard University professor was in the Soviet Union for a month-long visit earlier this year, his sixth since 1955. They included one year of study at the Soviet Law Institute in 1961-62.

The Soviet reviewer concentrated his fire on three theses that run through Professor Berman's discussion of Soviet law: first, that the Soviet legal system was not Marxist; second, that it relies heavily on the Russian past; and third, that Soviet law operated basically as a teacher and parent.

The review asserted that in pursuing these three lines of reasoning the law professor was reflecting the "common theses of modern anti-Communism."

"A reading of the book makes it clear that the author studied Soviet law to support these theses rather than to give an objective assessment," the reviewer said.

In reply to Professor Berman's view that the "Soviet legal system cannot be explained satisfactorily as a Marxist system," says the New York Times, Mr. Tumanov quoted Marx and Lenin to show that Communist theorists never denied that law would have to operate in a period of transition from capitalism to Communism.

Soviet ideologists have been sensitive to suggestions abroad that the society they have created is not developing according to the way envisaged by Marx.

The Soviet reviewer was particularly vehement in rejecting Professor Berman's discussion of the old Russian historical tradition in Soviet law. The professor wrote, for example, that the strong procuracy typical of the Soviet system could be traced back to the reforms of Peter the Great in the early 18th century.

Communist ideologists contend that the Soviet regime has made a complete break with the past and deny that historical parallels between Czarist Russia and the Soviet Union are valid.

The Soviet reviewer also challenged Professor Berman's stress on the "parental" aspect of Soviet law, referring to the view that the "individual before law is treated as a child or youth to be guided and trained and made to behave."

In that context, the Harvard professor described the legal man in the United States as a "rugged individualist" and his Soviet counterpart as a "dependent member of the collective group."

Mr. Tumanov said that the educational role of Soviet law was in-

Arab League Official Charges Britain, U.S. Want To Aid Israel

Abdul Khalek Hassouna, the Secretary-General of the Arab League, has alleged that Britain and the United States have urged the Soviet Union to let 2,600,000 Russian Jews settle in Israel, Arab sources in Casablanca said, reports the London Times. He accused the two countries of wanting to strengthen Israel.

The sources said that the allegation was contained in a 30-page confidential report prepared for the Arab heads of state conference in Casablanca last month, circulated among the Foreign Ministers already meeting to approve the summit agenda.

Abdul Khalek Hassouna appealed in the report to all Arab nations to tighten their ranks and unify their efforts in the military, political, and cultural fields to confront Israel provocations, the sources said, because Britain and the United States were trying to force the Soviet Union to allow 2,600,000 Jews to emigrate to Israel even though this would mean overpopulating the state.

The Secretary-General said that colonialism was the main bulwark of Israel, and that Britain and the United States were trying to pretend that the Palestine question had already been settled.

On the situation in the southern part of the Arabian peninsula, he said that Britain was trying to shatter cooperation between the principalities of the Arab (Persian) Gulf by spreading havoc and urally include Judaism in the so-called Jewish civilization."

He termed this peoplehood concept "fallacious," "both from the point of view of Judaism and from the point of view of Americanism." He added that in the U.S. "there is no historic reason to promote this sociological fallacy."

Rabbi Sigal said that the Constitution and all laws dealing with individuals stressed the principle of Americans "by nationality" and the right of those "who may or may not express some form of religious faith." He then held that the peoplehood concept "is not what American history calls for, and future generations of Jews will not be interested in it."

Rabbi Sigal said that "the fellowship of Jews was always a question of religion." There "is no other possible connection between such diverse types as dark Yemenites and us, who really have no cultural bonds and no common loyalties," he added, reports the New York Times. "What makes us both Jews is the Torah, that magnificent manifesto of monotheism. Our religion has served and continues to serve as the bond that unites those who call themselves Jews," he said.

In discussing intellectual currents in Jewish life, Rabbi Sigal cited two major ideologies: the concepts of "peoplehood" and "religious community." The Rabbi rejected the concept of "peoplehood," which he said "denotes that Jews are bound together not merely by religion but by ethnic, cultural, and even national bonds."

charitable and cultural affairs in Chattanooga. She was born on November 19, 1867, the daughter of Major and Mrs. William D. VanDyke. Major VanDyke was a Confederate leader during Reconstruction and was general counsel for many of the companies that figured in Chattanooga's industrial development.

Mrs. Och's mother was the daughter of Chief Justice James Deaderick of the Tennessee Supreme Court and Mrs. Deaderick. Her maternal grandfather was Dr. Ephraim McDowell, the noted surgeon who first used anesthesia.

She was educated at schools in Chattanooga. After her marriage she travelled extensively in Europe, the Middle East, and Africa.

She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Theodore DeCue Palmer, of Fort Myers Beach, Florida; two sons, Col. William VanDyke Ochs, U.S.A., retired; and Adolph Shelby Ochs, of Chattanooga; five grandchildren, and twelve great-grandchildren.

TREBLINKA DEATH CAMP TRIAL

The other defendants receiving life sentences were: Willy Mentz, 61, called "Frankenstein" by the inmates; August Miete, 56, "The Angel of Death," and Arthur Mathes, 63.

Mentz was accused by witnesses of having shot prisoners as soon as they arrived at the camp and of having killed prisoners ill with typhus or other diseases. He has worked as a butcher since World War II.

Mathes was said to have been in charge of the Treblinka gas chambers and crematoria. Miete was charged with having whipped prisoners to death and with having pointed out prisoners he had picked for the gas chambers.

Defendants sentenced to prison at hard labor for lesser terms were: Gustav Münzberger, 62, for 12 years; Otto Stadie, 68, seven years; Franz Suchomdl, 57, six years; Hermann Lambert, 55, four years; and Albert Rum, 75; three years, says the New York Times. The defendants had served up to six years in pretrial detention. This time he deducted from the sentences of those not confined for life.

tended to teach citizens the content of existing legislation and the need for voluntary execution of the law — not to establish a system of tutelage over the Soviet people as the author suggested, says the New York Times. The reviewer added that Professor Berman had painted a rosy picture of the legal system of the United States in making comparisons with Soviet practices.

terror in the region, and attempting to suppress the national movements in the "Occupied Arab South" (Aden and the protectorates).

He made a strong appeal to all the Arab nations to clear the atmosphere and stop the present radio war within their ranks. Every effort, he said, should be made to unify Arab resistance to British domination in the Occupied South and the Gulf principalities.

SEXUAL MORALITY: THE JEWISH VIEW

By the Reverend Raymond Apple, in the Liberal Jewish Monthly, of London, England

This article was first published under the auspices of the Religious Advisory Committee of the Association for Jewish Youth:

"Sex appeal is the keynote of our whole civilisation." The philosopher Bergson made this observation in 1935; in 1964 it is more than ever true. Press and screen stimulate us sexually; advertising exploits sex for business reasons; strip-tease and pornography are on the increase. All encourage greater sexual freedom, and among the results are high rates of illegitimacy, brides pregnant on their wedding days, and marriage breakdowns.

The 'new morality' says you do not improve moral standards merely by imposing prohibitions. Why then does Judaism still insist on chastity before marriage and faithfulness within marriage? It is not that we have declared war on sex, nor that we wish to supress a natural human instinct, nor because the business of sex is in any way shameful or in bad taste. Jewish tradition accepts sexual intercourse as God-given. "The Lord created all things in accordance with His wisdom, and whatever He created cannot possibly be shameful or ugly," wrote Moses Nachmanides. Passages concerning sex were always taught by the Jewish teacher without embarrassment, and learnt by the child without a smirk. 'The business of sex' was treated with frankness and dignity, and was always as much part of Jewish education as Yom Kippur or love of one's neighbour. (Today there is plenty of frankness but not much dignity.)

Regulations were made about the subject not because they were an aim in themselves, but as a means to an end — the promotion of high standards of conduct towards oneself, one's fellow man, and God. It was seen that sex can be the most enriching expression of human love and the most creative act open to man. Sex within marriage expresses love, loyalty, trust and understanding. When husband and wife share in physical intimacy, they do so because they share their whole lives. "This act of sexual union is holy and pure," said Nachmanides. "When a man is in union with his wife in a spirit of holiness and purity, the Divine Presence is with them."

Sexual experience outside marriage is rarely carried out in "a spirit of holiness and purity"; almost always it is accompanied by the fear of discovery and the fear of consequences. Usually it is a way of indulging the desire for the sensations of physical excitement. It "weakens, if it does not destroy, the appreciation of the sanctity of marriage, by reducing the sexual act to a mere physical pleasure. It stands to reason that what is a mere physical indulgence outside marriage cannot be considered more than that in it." (Israel Mattuck).

But why is marriage so significant? Firstly, because it is an example of happy co-operation and companionship, which nations could strive to emulate; secondly because it is the method of perpetuating the human race. Sex is the most intimate expression of both these purposes; if sex is not regarded as holy and as the privilege of marriage, then marriage loses much of its significance for human life.

Our selfish, pleasure-seeking society is not, it is true, very concerned with this kind of ideal. Most of us put our own welfare first. Yet the aim of Judaism has always been to raise the level of society and to cultivate a sense of responsibility for one's actions. This is only possible if one imposes high standards on oneself. In an easy going environment the temptation admittedly is to succumb and compromise one's principles. The challenge of Judaism is to seek a high standard of personal morality, which brings refinement to one's life and has a regenerating effect on society.

Religion has meaning only if it teaches man how to improve himself and the world. A laissez-faire religion that would remain silent on basic social issues, even though its ritual were punctiliously observed, would be sterile. It is precisely because Judaism is not laissez-faire that it has developed a moral code; "the commandments were given to purify and refine man" states the Midrash, and for that reason our religion insistently refuses to trade old morality for new.

MARRIAGES

SAMUEL-BOROVOY

The marriage of Miss Karen Lynn Borovoy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Borovoy, 1637 Bathurst Street, to Paul David Samuel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Saul Samuel, 1663 Bathurst Street, was solemnized at Beth Tzedec Synagogue, on Monday, March 21, at half-past five o'clock, by Rabbi Stuart E. Rosenberg, assisted by Cantor Joseph Cooper. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore an empire gown of ivory-coloured silk, cut with a round neckline; long sleeves; and full skirt, finishing with a cathedral train. Her tulle illusion veil was topped by a matching crown; and she carried a bouquet of phaeleanopsis orchids, and stephanotis. Miss Cheryl Borovoy was her sister's maid of honour, gowned in a hot-pink, peau de soie sheath, designed with a short, fitted jacket; with matching hair-bow, and carried a large, round bouquet of pink Sweetheart roses. The bridesmaids were: Misses Jacqueline Turman, of Long Island, N.Y.; Bonnie Rockman, Jill Levy, Sharon Sokoloff, and Sandra Cohen, each wearing a light pink, peau de soie gown, trimmed with velvet. They had flowered headbands; and carried white, and red roses. Inna Lynne Levitt, cousin of the bride; and Frances Samuel, niece of the groom; were attendants; each wearing a light pink, peau de soie dress, trimmed with velvet; with flowered head-bands; and bouquets of white, and red roses. Cindy Feldman, and Shelly Levitt, of Hamilton, Ont., cousins of the bride, were flower girls. They wore dresses similar to those of the bridesmaids; and carried nosegays of pink roses. Morton Samuel, of Rochester, N.Y., was best man for his brother. The ushers were: Leonard Miller, of Kitchener, Ont.; Lorne Rosenblood, Barry Rosenblood, both of Hamilton; and Barry Rosenberg; cousins of the bride; Ernest Simon, and Lerry Skolnick, of Rochester, N.Y.; cousins of the groom; Morton Skolnick, B. Joseph, and Martin Onrot. Standards of white and red carnations, and pink, and yellow roses were the wedding flowers. Three hundred guests were received. Mrs. Borovoy, mother of the bride, wore an empire gown of pink, peau de soie, sleeveless; with a matching hat. Mrs. Samuel, mother of the groom, wore a sleeveless, pink, gown, composed of a silk and satin bodice; a crepe skirt, and made with a round neckline; also a matching hat. Each had a wristlet of orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Paul David Samuel spent their wedding trip in Mexico City. The bride departed in a pink, wool dress; with a black mink jacket. They have taken up residence at 11 Goldfinch Court. Here for the marriage were: Edward Leibowitz, great-uncle of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Levitt, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Levitt, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Feldman, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rosenblood, all of Hamilton, Ont.; Dr. and Mrs. Irving Sedonberg, Mrs. Mary Retti, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Levitt, Mrs. Sarah Silverstein, of Cleveland, Ohio; Mrs. Rose Borovoy, of Detroit, Michigan; Mrs. Rebecca Tarsday, of Kitchener; all uncles, and aunts of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Feldman, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Robins; all of Hamilton; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tirnon, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Press, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Slotnick, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pearson, Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Ludwig, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Goldman, Mrs. Miriam Canvasser, Dr. and Mrs. Matthew Borovoy; all of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Louis Tarnday, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Miller; of Kitchener; Meyer Hertig, of Winnipeg, Manitoba; all cousins of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Zack, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Saul Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Levy, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Goldberg, Mrs. S. SILVERSTEIN-BERRIN

The marriage of Miss Brenda Gayle Berrin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Berrin, 14 Rosebury Road, to Saul Silverstein, son of Mrs. Rose Silverstein, 18 Park Hill Road, and the late Irving Silverstein, was solemnized at Beth Tzedec Synagogue, on Thursday, August 12, at six o'clock, by Rabbi Melvin L. Libman, assisted by Rabbi David Monson. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore an Empire gown of white peau de soie. The fitted bodice was designed with seed-pearl-beads; and elbow-length sleeves; and the long chapel train was draped to a scalloped bolero back. Her tulle illusion veil, embroidered with seed-pearl-beads, was attached to a seed-pearl-beaded crown; and she carried a prayer book, with white baby orchids, and stephanotis. Mrs. Gerald Baumwald was her sister's matron of honour. She wore a turquoise-blue peau de soie Empire gown; the bodice appliqued with beaded organza flowers; and with a full skirt. She had a beaded headpiece; and carried a bouquet of white and blue-tinted carnations. The bridesmaids were: Mrs. Stanley Cash, sister of the groom; Miss Pamela Shainhouse, cousin of the groom; Miss Hyla Beth Ginsberg, of Guelph, Ont., cousin of the bride; and Mrs. Michael Kaplan. Each wore a white, ribbon-embroidered, lace sheath gown, set over turquoise-blue satin; with inserts at the waist; and a full length panel, draped to the shoulder, and held by a bow. They had matching hair-bows; and carried bouquets of white, and blue-toned carnations. Sivi Baumwald, aged four years, niece of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a turquoise-blue, peau de soie dress; appliqued with beaded organza flowers on the skirt and bodice. She had a velvet head-band; and carried a nosegay of white and blue-tinted carnations. Dr. Stanley Cash, brother-in-law of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Gerald Baumwald, brother-in-law of the bride; Stanley Bernstein, Harry Silverstein, Michael Shainhouse, Jack Brudner, and Zevi Shainhouse; all cousins of the groom. Jason Cash, nephew of the groom, was ring-bearer. Silver candelabra, with centres of white and blue-tinted carnations, and yellow roses formed the table decorations. White and turquoise-blue carnations, roses, and pom-poms decorated the Synagogue. An orchestra played. Two hundred and eighty-five guests were received at a candelight dinner. Mrs. Berrin, mother of the bride, wore a turquoise-blue, beaded silk faille gown; under a matching chiffon cape with a beaded neckline; with a matching head-band. Mrs. Silverstein, mother of the groom, wore an aquamarine-blue peau de soie gown; appliqued with beaded lace. She had a matching head-band. Each had a wristlet of mauve orchids. Mrs. A. Shainhouse, grandmother of the groom, wore a blue, lace gown; with a matching hat; and a corsage of pink roses. Mr. and Mrs. Saul Silverstein spent their wedding trip in San Francisco, and Los Angeles, Calif.; Las Vegas, Nevada; and Phoenix, Arizona; the bride going away in an olive-green silk suit; with a gold-coloured blouse; and had a yellow orchid. They have taken up residence at 625 Roselawn Avenue. Here for the marriage were: Mr. and Mrs. J. Wolfond, Mr. and Mrs. E. Ginsberg, Mr. and Mrs. A. Wolfond, Mr. and Mrs. M. Wolfond, Ian Ginsberg, and Mrs. M. Enushevsky; all of Guelph, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. A. Shainhouse, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. S. Rogovin, of Buffalo, N.Y.; Mrs. H. Carell, of Niagara Falls, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. S. Bowman, of Peterborough, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Gold, of Waterloo, Ont.; and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rubenstein, of Hamilton.

SUKKOT IS THE HARVEST FESTIVAL

By Rabbi H. Leonard Poller, of Temple Beth Sholom, in Montreal

Sukkot is "The Festival" in the calendar of Jewish holiday observances. The harvest season is one of joy "Z'man-Simhatenu". After the sombre Days of Awe, the thanksgiving festival is a brilliant reminder that life is a totality of moods. Each aspect of introspection, sobriety, concern how satisfaction, joy and hope relate to the totality of living. Man is to make the most of his days by blending all the ingredients of life into a wholesome portion.

What more appropriate way is there for our people and our fellow citizens to take to heart the message of extending gratitude for nature's bounty? We are blessed in our prosperity and enriched by its possibilities. All of us should consciously express our thankfulness on the combined holiday.

Prosperity's ultimate reward, according to Jewish tradition, is length of days. The "Zakken" is highly regarded and age respected. Compare this to other civilizations who cast away the elders! The science of geriatrics, of treating the needs of senior citizens, is just beginning to take hold in our own land and it still has a long way to go in its work.

On Sukkot the Book of Kohelleth is read. The rabbis understood King Solomon as having authored it during his "Golden Age". Sukkot, a time of joy, includes the words of the elder, so fulfillment of years and service should not be overlooked.

Sukkot is observed by Reform Jews for eight days and for nine by Orthodox and Conservative Jews. The holiday was called the Harvest Festival because, according to the Biblical book of Deuteronomy, it was celebrated at the conclusion of the autumnal harvest. The book of Exodus also describes it as the "Festival of Ingathering" of the fruits of the earth.

Many ancient symbols, evocative of the Biblical past of the Jewish people during which their culture was both agricultural, and nomadic, survive unchanged in this holiday. In keeping with the Biblical injunction, Jews build "sukkah", booths, outside their homes or synagogue. These are made of three wooden walls, and the roof is covered with green boughs and decorated inside with the fruits of the harvest season.

Meals are eaten in the "sukkah" during this holiday and prayers and songs of gratitude and joy are recited in them. The building of "sukkah" is also associated historically with the liberation from Egypt and the long wandering of the Jewish people before they reached the Promised Land of Palestine.

It is also thought to symbolize the fragility and transitory quality of life and to serve as a reminder to Jews that material things, like "sukkot" have little permanence. Reminiscent of both harvest and the desert, two other ancient symbols are an integral part of the "Sukkot" observance. They are the "etrog," or citron, and the "Lulav," a palm branch.

The prevailing spirit of this holiday is joyousness and rejoicing, in keeping with Biblical commandment which enjoins: "Thou shalt be altogether joyful", and the description of Sukkot is, in Jewish tradition, "The season of our rejoicing."

SPEAK OUT ON RELIGIOUS COERCION IN ISRAEL

By Dr. Alex Hershoft, of Washington, D.C., Secretary of the American Friends Of Religious Freedom In Israel

The recent Washington vigil, sponsored by the American Jewish Conference on Soviet Jewry to protest the repression of Jewish culture and religion in the Soviet Union, brings to mind the tragic state of religious freedom in a country which was the very cradle of Judeo-Christian ethics.

In the course of the 17 years since it won its independence on the battle fields of Palestine and in the assembly halls of the United Nations, Israel has scored innumerable social, economic, and scientific achievements to win the title of bastion of democracy in the Middle East. Yet, at no time in all these years of progress and enlightenment has Israel fully implemented the solemn pledge of its Declaration of Independence to "guarantee freedom of religion and conscience" to all its inhabitants. The 17-year record of the government of Israel is one of constant appeasement and retreat in the face of the growing threat of clerical political parties.

In modern-day Israel, selected state-sanctioned religious hierarchies have exclusive jurisdiction over all matters of personal status. Mixed marriages and civil marriages are not recognized and, since Jewish Orthodoxy is the only sanctioned Jewish faith, neither are marriages performed under Conservative or Reform auspices. The children of such marriages are considered illegitimate and relegated to second-class citizenship.

In modern-day Israel, Orthodox Jewish authorities have denied the use of public halls to Reform congregations by threatening owners with the withdrawal of kashrut certification; they have shut down recreational and public transportation facilities on the Sabbath, Israel's only day of leisure, by threats of violence or political and economic reprisals. But worse is yet to come. The "Sabbath Law," virtually assured of passage during the next parliamentary session, will make the operation of any enterprise on the Sabbath subject to criminal prosecution.

Religious coercion in Israel has already engendered widespread resentment against religion and caused irreparable harm to the nation's economic and cultural development. On the international arena, it is staining Israel's image and flouting the struggle of Jewish leaders on behalf of religious freedom everywhere. Although this problem must ultimately be resolved by the people of Israel, it behooves every man who holds dear the principle of religious freedom and the welfare of Israel to speak out on these matters. The reluctance to do so on the grounds that it may damage Israel's cause does neither service nor credit to the valiant little state.

The American Jewish Conference on Soviet Jewry is to be applauded for its efforts on behalf of religious freedom for Jews in the Soviet Union.

At the same time, let no one forget that religious freedom is the natural birthright of every man, wherever he may live, even in Israel.

The above article came to the Review as a letter from the secretary of the American Friends Of Religious Freedom In Israel, in Washington, D.C., of which the other officers are: Professor Horace Kallen, president; David Bronstein, of Toronto, and Abraham Schenker, of New York, vice-presidents. Among the members of the board are: Rabbi W. Gunther Plaut, Rabbi Reuben Slonim, and Mr. Bronstein, of Toronto; Rabbi Ira Eisenstein, and Professor Kallen, of New York.

BEN-GURION SEES NEED TO REVITALIZE BIBLE COVENANT TO SERVE AS "LIGHT TO OTHER NATIONS"

Former Premier David Ben-Gurion said at Tel Aviv some time ago that there was a need to revitalize the covenant of the Bible in which a united Jewish people would serve as "a light to other nations." In an address that was essentially a dissertation on the meaning of the covenant, Mr. Ben-Gurion gently warned the Bnai Brith convention, says the New York Times, of the dangers to American Jews of assimilation.

"There is a great danger to the survival of the Jews in the Diaspora," Mr. Ben-Gurion said, "unless Jews everywhere remember the covenant."

"I would not ask all American Jews to leave their country and come to Israel," the former Israeli leader declared. But he added that to come once every five or six years to visit Israel was "not enough" to assure a living and meaningful covenant among the Jewish people. He was alluding to the fact that the last Bnai Brith convention was in 1959.

Mr. Ben-Gurion said that "remembrance of the covenant" posed two obligations on Jews abroad: a knowledge of Hebrew without which, he said, the Bible could not truly be appreciated; and a Hebrew education designed "to create a personal link between American Jewry and the land of Israel."

He urged American Jews to "send your children to Israel" for a year or so of study. "Some will then remain here," he said.

This, Mr. Ben-Gurion asserted, would assure the survival of the Jews in the United States, for "in America you can be a good Jew and still be a good American."

As an example of how the Jewish people were beginning to become a light to many nations," the former Premier cited Israel's contributions to the new states of Africa, says the New York Times. "The only people who are trusted in Africa are the people of Israel, and this is not only because they are not afraid of us as a small nation," Mr. Ben-Gurion said.

He paid tribute to efforts by the United States and other major powers to aid Africa but he added that Israel was more successful because the Africans "feel our approach is more brotherly and more human."

"Our secret weapon as a people is our moral, intellectual and spiritual superiority, which we inherited from the Bible," Mr. Ben-Gurion declared. "But we must strive to be a better people, as one single Jewish people living wherever we live."

Earlier in the day a plenary session adopted a resolution calling on the Soviet Government to "adhere to its constitutional statutes and ideological assertions by restoring to the Jewish citizens their full cultural, educational, national, and religious rights."

The resolution also appealed to the Soviet authorities "to end the vilifying press campaign directed against Judaism and to combat anti-Semitism in all its manifestations."

Such "token concessions as the isolated Yiddish publications and the limited baking of matzohs" could not be interpreted as "even partial fulfillment" of the right of Soviet Jewry to equality there, the resolution stated.

In another resolution, the plenary session urged the Soviet Government to permit Russian Jews separated from their families abroad to leave the Soviet Union if they wished to. The resolution recalled that the Soviet Government had encouraged the reunion of separated Armenian families.

Another resolution demanded that the United States prohibit the use of Federal funds to aid parochial primary and secondary schools. This has been a controversial issue in the American Jewish community, says the New York Times, with the Orthodox generally favoring the proposal.
